

Greg Schultz

Greg Schultz has managed winning political campaigns at the local, state, and national level. His career spans work in county government, the Ohio Governor's Office, and the White House.

As the architect and manager of the winning Biden democratic presidential primary campaign, Greg helped ensure that the candidate's core strengths and unifying message remained consistent, setting the stage for the general election. In his subsequent role as the General Election Strategist and Senior Advisor, Greg oversaw the campaign's engagement, coordination, and battleground state efforts with the broad democratic party ecosystem, including the DNC, state democratic parties, Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, and outside partners.

Greg also held senior roles in the Obama/Biden campaigns, including managing the 2012 re-election in the key battleground state of Ohio, and joined the White House in late 2013 as the Senior Advisor for Vice President Biden and Special Assistant to President Obama.

His profile in the Vice President's office included overseeing public engagement efforts, such as launching the Cancer Moonshot engagement with business leaders and advocacy groups, as well as co-founding "It's on Us", the national organization working to change the culture around sexual assault on college campuses. In addition, Greg oversaw the Vice President's intergovernmental affairs and served as his political advisor.

After leaving the administration, Greg spent 2017 and 2018 running Biden's American Possibilities PAC, overseeing his midterm engagement and travel to key districts, states, and communities across the country. With Greg's direction, Biden helped Democrats win back the House, while strengthening his network in key constituencies. Greg graduated from The Ohio State University with a B.A. in history and political science and a master's degree in education.
